Chairman’s Statement

ASSA has come a long way since its establishment in 1998. The number of memberships has increased from seven social security organisations representing five ASEAN countries to 21 organisations representing eight ASEAN countries this year. Additionally, we had two institutions from Cambodia joined the ASSA Board Meeting as observer in the last year. I hope that in the near future those from Cambodia and Myanmar will join this fraternity. Finally, this would cover the entire ASEAN countries in our ASSA.

Even if we are all aware of what we have been facing challenges in the future concerning the globalization of the economy, new technology, increasing proportion of aging people and changing structures of family units, the ASEAN countries could assure their citizens to get access to their social security entirely. An extraordinary notification goes to the Vietnam Health Insurance Law that came into effect since July 1, 2009, commencing the implementation of Health Insurance policy in Vietnam with the roadmap of achieving the universal coverage by 2014.

ASSA has been very successful in the area of knowledge sharing. The members are able to cultivate the fruitful experiences of the countries undertaking the universal coverage scheme in health care and the sustainable social security systems. The key long-term objective of learning effort is to assure the sustainability of such systems. The vigorous network could possibly share ideas of seeking diversifying sources of financing to, in turn, provide adequate income replacement.

Ultimately, the prosperity of our society is due in large measure to our tight collaboration. The mutual learning growth is likely to develop such a great success. In turn, this will promote and improve the quality of life of our people.

Secretary-General's Statement

The experiences of many countries introducing National Health Security as part of their strategies aiming at reducing poverty and improving the health status of their populations are very relevant to all ASSA members. Different policy approaches and systems should be undertaken in order to expand social protection and provide access to health care in both formal and informal sectors with the aim to achieving Universal Coverage. Another critical issue is the social protection for aging people. The pension systems e.g. long-term care, pension funds, etc., need to be strengthened and set aside in advance for this common emerging phenomena in our region.

It is imperative that the ASSA joint learning network strengthens its coordinative efforts to introduce truly responsive programs for the regional populace. As we make our joint learning network accessible to more sectors in our countries, let us also tool into the possibility of strengthening our human capitals through skill trainings. In consonance with our ASSA objectives of sharing experiences and developing human resources among members, I am optimistic that we can build a joint learning network that help propel the Region to better economic heights.

After all, social security does not only mean that we help alleviate poverty, but it is a constant call for us, ASSA members, to devise ways to enhance human capacity to be more productive, despite changing economic environments.

The close co-operation amongst ASSA member organizations will be helpful in our endeavour to find practical solutions to design our social security systems as part of the ongoing reform process, We should also continue to explore other areas of cooperations as part of our strategy to challenge our future.

Cambodian social security delegates visited SSO, Laos

10 Cambodian delegates led by the deputy director of National Social Security Fund, Cambodia made a study visit in Laos from 21-23 December 2009. The delegates were warmly received by Mr. Khamphuang Inthaseng, General Director of SSO. The purpose of this visit was to focus on basic experiences of implementation of the SSO on registration of employers and employees, collection of contributions, benefit payments, fund management and providing health insurance under the scheme.

During this visit, the delegates had also exchanged views and experiences with other agencies such as: State Authority Social Security which is another social security agency providing social security for public sector and the Community Base Health Insurance Fund under Ministry of Health which provides health insurance to people in the informal sector in Laos.

The study visit of Cambodian delegates is a good start of cooperation amongst two countries on the exchange views and experiences on social security, as Laos might not have an advance lesson to share with others, however, it might be worth for such country starting development of social security system.
EPF: Retirement planning: Don’t be sorry, start early

The majority of us are probably aware of how important it is to financially prepare for retirement, especially with the current emphasis in the media. But as we are also aware, it is difficult to start planning for retirement especially when you’re still in your twenties or thirties. At that age, you rather save for a car, a holiday or simply for a shopping spree.

The fact is, no one can really afford to keep postponing his or her financial planning for retirement. Achieving your retirement dream does not happen automatically. It may not be easy but it is a necessity to consider how you will support yourself and people who still depend on you during your retirement. As with most things, the two key things that you need to do are to plan ahead and to follow through with your plans in order to have sufficient income to cover your years in retirement.

So when is the best time to start?

Now is as good a time as any - the earlier you start, the bigger your nest egg will be when you retire. If you decide to retire at 55, you need a plan that can spawn income for at least another 20 years.

Even when you have planned for retirement and accumulated the nest egg you feel will be sufficient for your golden years, you should not forget that you may outgrow the years you have planned for. With advancements in medical care over the years, we are expected to live longer than our parents’ generations. Longer life expectancy is not the only factor to consider when charting out your retirement plan. You should also consider the rising cost of medical treatments (and we will probably need more of these during our retirement years) as well as the impact of inflation. If these factors are not taken into account in your planning, you will find your nest egg depleting faster than expected. It is vital that the financial decisions that you make today will enable you to live your golden years in the way you desire.

Even when you think you have planned well for your golden years, your situation or surroundings during retirement may suddenly change that will compel you to re-look at your financial preparations. For instance, what happens if you fall seriously ill during those years and require treatments but you have not opted for a healthcare coverage?

As you can see, retirement planning does not come to an end once you have reached retirement; it is an ongoing process that requires constant reviewing and adjusting depending on the changes to your situation, if specified goals are to be met. The planning process moves from accumulation of wealth to making the right decisions about how your assets are to be used. Life is full of unexpected happenings, but with a little planning, you might protect yourself and your loved ones from unnecessary difficulties.

So how much money will you need when you retire? This is a difficult question as there is no correct answer. It all depends on an individual’s lifestyle and retirement goals.

By taking into account the following factors, you should be able to get a better picture of the income you will need during retirement:

1. The number of years you will live after you retire - Although this is a difficult question to answer, one can base it on average life expectancy of Malaysians which is 75 years old. With advancements in the medical field, life expectancy is expected to increase in the coming years.

2. Your expenses during retirement - You will need to decide on what your wants and needs might be when you retire. This could be done by determining how much you spend now and then subtracting expenses that you won’t have after retirement, such as mortgage payments or the children’s education fund. You should then add additional costs you are likely to have after retirement such as health care. Remember to also factor in inflation when coming up with the final figure.

3. Savings from the national pension fund (such as the Employees Provident Fund of Malaysia) - While it is not recommended to rely solely on your savings from this fund for your retirement income, the savings will obviously be a significant source of income during your golden years. You should ensure that your savings are in order by regularly checking the account statements issued by the pension fund and use the figures to estimate an amount that can be added to your other projected retirement income.
EPF MALAYSIA Encourages the Self Employed to Save For Their Retirement

The thought of retirement can be a very daunting experience, a feeling that becomes even more amplified in the case of some people who are self-employed. More often than not, this fear is derived from whether an individual has enough savings put aside, are able to continue to make a livelihood, and whether all their debts have been paid off.

Taking into account today's longer longevity rate, the increasing number of illnesses and diseases, and the threat of becoming incapacitated due to poor health or other medical reasons, savings for an old age has never become more important. For the self-employed, this risk is even greater. While some may have already taken the necessary steps and made investments ahead for their retirement, the realities of today also mean that there is still a great deal who may not have the financial liberty of doing so.

In 2010, the Government of Malaysia introduced what is called the 1 Malaysia Retirement Savings Scheme aimed at encouraging some basic form of retirement savings for individuals who are not drawing a fixed monthly salary. Under the new scheme that is being administered by the Employees Provident Fund (EPF), savings will not only earn annual dividends but will also benefit from an additional 5 per cent contribution from the Government subjected to a maximum of RM60 per year over the next five years from 2010-2014.

The scheme is intended to benefit those who fall under the broader definition or category of self-employment, namely individuals who are farmers, hawkers, taxi drivers, fishermen, small time business operators to fitness instructors, disc jockeys and even singers and actors.

Under the scheme, those who opt to contribute can set aside a minimum of just RM50 per month. The maximum contribution is up to RM5,000 per month. Realizing that cash flow is generally a big concern for the self-employed, the scheme was also devised to be flexible enough so as not to require contributions to be made on a monthly basis but rather as and when individuals could afford to.

And while the self-employed are not compelled by law to make a monthly contribution, they too however, are entitled to all the benefits accorded to EPF contributors in making withdrawals for the purchase of a home, education, emergency and medical reasons.

As Malaysia's largest retirement fund, the EPF's role in administering this new scheme is no different from the commitment it has made to help employees from both the private and non-pensionable public sectors grow a fraction of their monthly salary into a healthy and sufficient retirement fund.

The long-term goal of this new scheme is of course to establish awareness and more importantly acceptance for the need of some form of basic social security for the self-employed.

This is where the EPF's motto of Savings For Old Age not only lends credence to the amount of savings an individual makes towards retirement, but fundamentally underlining the importance of contingencies to preserve one's quality of life and safeguard them and their dependents against disability, incapacitation, sickness and death.
GSIS COLLEGE SCHOLARSHIP PROGRAM

As a social institution that provides for the needs and looks after the welfare of government workers, the GSIS has the responsibility to ensure that the children of its members are likewise taken care of. After all, government workers provide the muscle for the state machinery to function well, and it is but proper that the state shares in the burdens of its workforce.

While the GSIS is primarily known as an institutional investor in profit-oriented instruments such as bonds, government securities, stocks and equities, its scholarship program may also be considered as a form of investment—after all, an educated citizenry contributes to a healthy and robust national economy, to which the fate of the pension fund is inevitably intertwined.

Towards this end, the GSIS Scholarship Program was conceptualized and launched in 1998 as part of its corporate social responsibility program. There were 25 scholars in the first batch for the school year 1998-1999. In 2007, the GSIS rationalized the program by removing the competitive examinations which used to be the basis for selecting the scholars.

Thereafter, 200 scholarship slots are raffled-off every school year to give active members in good standing the chance to participate in the program. The winners of the raffle will nominate their scholars, who could either be their children, nephews or nieces, brothers or sisters, spouses, or anyone that they want to nominate.

“The GSIS Scholarship Program is one of our premier Corporate Social Responsibility programs. With it, we can help a lot of our youths achieve their goals and live their dreams by providing them free tertiary education,” said GSIS President and General Manager Winston F. Garcia.

Since its inception, the GSIS Scholarship Program has taken under its wings a total of 971 beneficiaries, all children of active and retired GSIS members. Under the program, scholars enjoy tuition and miscellaneous fees of P20,000 per semester and a monthly allowance of P2,000, for a maximum of P30,000 per semester.

The GSIS Scholarship Program is open to all high school graduates, regardless of age and year of graduation in high school. The scholars may also enroll in any four- or five-year course of their choice. Even those currently enrolled in college but have not yet graduated from any four- or five-year degree course may be nominated. GSIS scholars may enroll in any school or degree of their choice. Records show that since the program’s inception, majority of the grantees have pursued engineering, accountancy, and nursing courses.

All GSIS active members with updated premium payments can join the program. To join, members just need to fill up an application form available in all GSIS offices nationwide and also downloadable from the GSIS website (www.gsis.gov.ph). Duly accomplished forms must then be submitted to any GSIS office for processing.

The deadline for application is April 23, 2010 while the electronic raffle draw will be on May 19, 2010.
SSS inaugurates guitar-shaped building in Philippines’ southern hub

CEBU CITY - People claiming benefits and seeking to enjoy their privileges as members of the Social Security System (SSS) can look forward to convenient and more comfortable facilities in a new building that combines the soft curves of the guitar with the first three letters of the institution’s name.

Cebu City Vice-Mayor Michael Rama said the guitar-shaped building along Osmeña Boulevard, which was inaugurated on November 17, is a welcome addition to the city’s landscape in the heart of downtown Cebu, which lies about 600 kilometers south of the capital city of Manila.

“The guitar-shaped building is designed to provide comfortable and easy service to Cebuanos,” SSS Executive Vice President Horacio Templo said. “The new building reflects our commitment to stay on top of business in Cebu, the hub of economic growth outside of Metro Manila.”

The three-storey glass and aluminium-clad building could accommodate big crowds. It is painted mango yellow, a reference to a local export product and the building exudes a golden hue during the day which signify the SSS golden anniversary in 2007.

The new building stands on the site of the old SSS regional office building, a former Cebu landmark that was torn down in the 1990’s because of structural damage caused by a powerful earthquake. It will be the headquarters of the SSS Central Visayas Cluster, which supervises 15 branches in the provinces of Cebu, Samar, Bohol and Leyte.

Templo said collections through the teller windows of SSS offices in the region for the first nine months of 2009 totalled P1.9 billion, an 11 percent increase from the same period last year.

He said benefit payments from January to September in the entire Central Visayas - sickness, maternity, disability, retirement and death - totalled P959.99 million, up seven percent from total disbursements over the same period in 2008.

The love for music and a strong religious background are known Cebuano traits that may characterize Cebu’s economic development and the guitar, together with other export products such as furniture and fashion accessories, are major drivers of the local economy.

Templo said the building’s guitar design, which is clearly discernible from an aerial view, is a tribute to Cebuanos and the musical instrument that is one of the most popular products made in the province.

“Guitar craftsmen from Cebu are recognised world-wide for their talent, skill and diligence, which are qualities that exemplify Filipino workers who comprise SSS membership,” he said.

Vice Mayor Rama commended the SSS for acknowledging local values and showing it in tangible terms such as a guitar-shaped building in recognition of the Cebuano indomitable spirit.

“Putting up a building that looks like a guitar shows that SSS has a heart and that it loves music, and a lover of music promotes unity and harmony,” Rama said.

He said that SSS is “indispensable” in progressive cities, adding: “You cannot have a progressive city without businesses, and when there are businesses, SSS will not be far behind. Productivity of the people will always result if they are taken care of by their management, and SSS is a watchdog in that connection.”

SSS Cebu started as a field representative office at the Labucay Building in 1958, a few months after the pension fund was established on September 1, 1957. It has been occupying the three-storey Suarez Building at the corner of Gorordo Avenue and Escario Street since 1997.
RP pursues social Security agreements with Japan, Portugal

Social security officials from the Philippines and Japan discussed the possibility of implementing a bilateral agreement on social protection during a meeting at the Social Security System (SSS) main office in Quezon City from August 3 to 5.

SSS Vice President for International Affairs Judy Frances See said the initial meeting aims to provide better access to social protection for Filipinos employed in Japan and Japanese citizens working in the Philippines.

"Bilateral agreements help ensure social protection for migrant workers, especially since they are usually excluded from social security schemes in their country of employment," See said.

SSS Executive Vice President and Chief Actuary Horacio Templo and Minister Jiro Okuyama of the Japan Embassy in the Philippines signed the minutes of the meeting as heads of the two delegations.

The delegates were representatives of various government agencies such as Japan’s Ministry of Foreign Affairs, Social Insurance Agency and the Ministry of Health, Labor and Welfare; and the SSS, Government Service Insurance System, Philippine Health Insurance Corporation and Philippine Overseas Employment Administration.

SSS was also part of the Philippine delegation that drafted a bilateral agreement with Portugal during a meeting at the SSS main office from October 28 to 30.

General Directorate for Social Security Vice General Director Manuel Pinto of Portugal and Commissioner Jose Sonny Matula, labor representative to the SSS board, headed the two parties.

The participants shared information on their countries’ social security programs and bilateral agreements with other nations. The two delegations agreed to continue discussions at Lisbon, Portugal within the first quarter of 2010 to finalize the agreement.
Collection of CPF via e-submission

The Central Provident Fund (CPF) is a fully-funded, defined contribution social security scheme where both employers and employees have to make monthly contributions into the employees' (CPF members) individual accounts. Employers are responsible for collecting the employee's share of the CPF contributions and paying it promptly together with their share to CPF Board every month.

Over the last 55 years, CPF has evolved from a simple compulsory national savings plan into a comprehensive national social security savings scheme providing not only for the retirement but also the housing and healthcare needs of Singaporeans. Today, CPF Board administers $516.8 billion of funds for 3.3 million CPF members.

Key to the successful operation of the CPF system is its effective and efficient collection system that provides timely and accurate collection and crediting of CPF contributions into the members' individual accounts. The CPF collection system has recently been re-certified according to the latest ISO 9001:2008 Quality Management System standards in July last year. Today, about 115,000 employers are submitting the CPF contribution details and payments for 1.72 million employees monthly. Total CPF collection amounts to about $1.61 billion each month.

CPF Board also has an effective recovery and enforcement framework in place to support the collection process. This ensures that the employers' default rate for payment of CPF contributions has been kept very low at 0.51%.

Moving forward, to ensure a continually effective and efficient collection system, CPF Board recognizes the need to get as many employers as possible to submit the CPF contribution details and payments electronically (CPF e-Submission) instead of using hardcopy forms and cheques. CPF Board has therefore been actively promoting and encouraging employers to convert to e-submission. Today, almost all large employers (i.e. employers with more than 10 employees) have been on CPF e-Submission since 2005. As at end of 2009, 60.9% (72,300) of all employers' monthly submissions are performed electronically as compared to 11.5% (10,390) as at end of 2003. This translates to a high 93.0% in terms of employee count (1.67 million).

With the successful conversion of the majority of employers to e-submission, CPF Board has been able to reduce the number of data entry officers (required for transcribing data in hardcopy forms to the computer system) by almost half to only 23 as at end of 2009. The number of employers' errors in the submitted CPF contribution details had also been reduced significantly by as much as 45% over the same period.

In its efforts to convert employers to e-submission, CPF Board recognizes the need for the following 2-prong strategy:

Providing Different “e” Platforms for Employers with Different Needs

As different employers may have different needs, CPF Board provides a variety of electronic modes (“e” platforms) for employers to do their e-submissions. An employer can therefore choose an “e” platform that he finds most suitable for him to submit the CPF contribution details and payments.

Large employers can easily submit electronically via file transfer from their payroll systems while the Online Form (which is provided in the CPF website) would be suitable for smaller employers (with less than 15 employees) to do their e-submissions easily and conveniently. Employers who need more value-added functions can use the free Auto-eXcel software provided by CPF Board to facilitate their monthly submissions. Employers would only need to provide some key data like their employees' date of birth and wages, and the CPF payable (including both employer's and employee's shares) would then be automatically computed for them.

More recently, CPF Board faces the challenge of converting the smaller employers, who tend to be less IT-savvy, to e-submission. It recognizes the need to offer a mode which does not require a computer with internet access. Employers, who do not have computers, can now use any of the 600 AXS stations (multi-application transactional terminal) that are located islandwide to submit their CPF contribution details. Those who are always on the move can opt to perform e-submission via their mobile phones. Together with a local bank, CPF Board also offers e-submission via the bank's internet banking website.

Moving forward, CPF Board has plans to migrate all employers who are currently using the offline Auto-eXcel software to the online platform. With the migration to Auto eXcel Plus, employers would be able to auto-compute the CPF payable, submit their contribution details and view the processed details at one location in a hassle-free manner.

Newly registered employers are also invited to sign up for the monthly Employer Classroom sessions which are designed to help employers understand their roles and obligations on CPF matters, and CPF e-Submission.

In addition, CPF Board has a dedicated e-submission helpdesk for employers to call if they need the Board's assistance on their queries. Employers can also request the Board to conduct site visits to resolve their technical issues and problems with e-submission.

Over the years, CPF Board has continually improved and transformed its collection system into an effective and efficient system which has benefited the Board, the employers and the members. CPF Board will continue to explore and implement new initiatives to enhance its collection system and encourage more employers to convert to e-submission.

Promotion and Providing Dedicated Support

CPF Board conducts "e-submission" seminars regularly to raise the awareness of employers on e-submission and its benefits. Besides this, CPF Board also gave talks and briefings in partnership with other government agencies and business associations like Accounting and Corporate Regulatory Authority, Singapore Human Resource Institute and Singapore Chinese Chambers of Commerce & Industry.

SSO’s attempts to extend the social security coverage to informal sector

In Thailand, the total population at present is about 66 million of which 37 million in the labour force. However, it was found by the result of the survey on informal labour in 2007 that the number of informal labour was 24.1 million persons while the formal labour was 13.7 million person or 36.3%.

The SSO is responsible for providing protection and security for employees in enterprises with 1 or more employees in case of non work-related injury. The scheme is divided into compulsory and voluntary workers. For the compulsory insured persons (article 33), SSO now provides the insured persons 7 types of benefit, namely sickness, maternity, invalidity, death, child allowance, old-age pension and unemployment. For voluntary insured persons, there are insured persons under article 39 and 40. In part of article 39, the insured persons who terminate their jobs and become self-employed, the SSO collected the contributions at the amount of 432 baht per month for 6 types of benefit: sickness, maternity, invalidity, death, child allowances and old age pension. People who would like to become voluntary insured person can apply to be insured person under article 40. They have to pay solely contributions at the rate of 3,360 baht per year for three types of benefit, namely maternity, invalidity and death.

Farmers, fishermen, actors, singers, guides, taxi drivers, super model, vendors, waste pickers, home workers, housemaid, general workers etc. who do not receive the social security coverage can apply for being insured person under article 40 by the following qualifications
1) Any person who is not under 15 years old, but not over 60 years old.
2) Persons who are not the insured person under article 33 and 39.
3) No forbidden diseases as proclaimed by SSO.

The SSO is during consideration to improve the benefits for the insured persons under article 40 as follows:
1. Increase benefits from 3 to 5 benefits (sickness and old age as well)
2. Adjust yearly contribution payment to monthly contribution payment (from 3,360 baht a year to 280 baht per person per month)
3. Encourage government to share in contribution payment.

It is expected that this attempt will be successful in one year.
Smart ID Card Replaces Gold Card & Old ID Card

From October 1, 2009, people registered under the universal health care scheme could clarify their identification using only new Smart ID Cards instead of the Gold Cards together with the conventional ID Cards upon requesting for health care services under this scheme.

NHISO secretary-general Dr Winai Sawasdivorn said the government had a policy to allow Thai citizens to hold a multi-purpose ID card that can be used also in requesting for service from a health care unit under the universal health care scheme. When seeking health care services at a health facility, people simply show this ID card without the gold card. This new ID card contains basic information about any of the three health care schemes under which the card holder is registered.

The implementation has been undertaken nationwide by the National Health Security Office in cooperation with the Interior and Public Health Ministries. The Bureau of Registration Administration of the Department of Provincial Administration that is in charge of the Interior Ministry's ID card issuing has also launched campaigns to raise the public awareness for applying the new one. The health care service establishments under the universal health care scheme in all parts of the country have already been notified about this change. Nevertheless, during this transitional period, the Gold Card along with the old type of ID card can still be shown at a health facility for acquiring health services.

Due to the fact that the new smart ID card contains information of each individual of his health care right on different schemes, this should eradicate the problem that one patient is mistakenly registered under two or more different health care schemes at the same time.

“What’s more, other types of information such as birth and death are also stored in the same card with the help of official updates from the Interior Ministry's Bureau of Registration Administration,” Dr. Winai addressed.

Dr. Winai also said that from now on, people with the right to receive health care under the universal health care scheme in all parts of the country could enjoy fast and satisfactory service by presenting only their new ID cards at any contracted health care unit. For more information, they are encouraged to call the NHISO’s hotline number 1330 at any time around the clock.
NHSO Receives Outstanding Revolving Fund Award for Second Year

The National Health Security Office has won an Outstanding Revolving Fund Award from the Department of Controller, the Ministry of Finance, for the second time in 2009.

The award was aimed to encourage effective management of all the funds that will eventually benefit the society at large.

The Deputy Finance Minister, Dr Pruttichai Damrongrat, said the revolving fund had a crucial role in supporting the state agencies to achieve their goals and respond well to the government’s urgent policies.

Currently, the Finance Ministry has been monitoring the total number of 107 funds with total assets of 1.74 trillion baht. The ministry initiated this award since 2008 and continued in the following year.

The ministry is intended to give out the award every year. There are two categories of the awards: the Outstanding Performance and Outstanding Development. The objectives of giving out this award are to create motivation and pride and encourage the development of the revolving funds so that they can achieve their goals and best benefit the public. A judge of specialists and an external advisory team plays the responsible role of evaluating the funds and selecting the winners.

In 2009, three funds jointly won the Outstanding Performance Award, namely the National Health Security Fund, the Fund for Metrology System Development, and the Revolving Fund for Displaying of Thai Coins and Currencies. It has to be noted that the National Health Security Fund won this award for the second year.

Two more funds jointly won in the Outstanding Development Award are the Revolving Fund of the Defence Pharmaceutical Factory and the Revolving Fund of the Weapon Production Center.

Dr Winai Sawasdivorn, Secretary-General of the National Health Security Office, said the NHSO is the management body of the National Health Security Fund and performed under the supervision of the National Health Security Board.

The NHSO is responsible for managing the fund in order to build up health security for the rest of people who are not registered under the Social Security Scheme or the Civil Servant Medical Benefit Scheme. This scheme was entitled as the “Universal Health Care Scheme”.

The NHSO focuses on ensuring fairness in the health care service system, encouraging improvements in service efficiency and quality, and promoting access to health care service in specific groups of people who are critically in need of the service.

In 2009, the National Health Security Fund had a total budget of 110 billion baht and covered about 47 million people. Apparently, 99.18% of the entire population are eligible to receive health security, health care service, disease prevention, and physical rehabilitation under all three health care schemes.
